Erin Jones
Leveraging Our Collective Stories to Better Serve Community

Erin Jones has been involved in and around schools for the past 26 years. She has taught in a variety of environments, from predominantly Black to predominantly White to some of the most diverse communities in the nation. Erin received an award as the Most Innovative Foreign Language Teacher in 2007, while working at Stewart Middle School in Tacoma and was the Washington State Milken Educator of the Year in 2008, while teaching at Rogers High School in Spokane. She received recognition at the White House in March of 2013 as a "Champion of Change" and was Washington State PTA’s “Outstanding Educator” in 2015. After serving as a classroom teacher and instructional coach, Erin worked as an executive for two State Superintendents. Erin left the Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction 5 years ago to work in college-access at the school district level. She left her job to run as a candidate for State Superintendent and was the first Black woman to run for any state office in Washington state, a race she lost by a mere 1%. Erin has two children in college, one who works full-time and plays rugby, and a husband, James, who is a teacher in North Thurston School District.

- Tom Gosiorowski, P.E. | Director, Summit County Public Works
- Robert Knickrehm | Director Base Operations, Keystone Resort
- Don Reimer, P.E., AICP | Planning Director, Summit County Planning Department

Learn by doing at this hands-on workshop while giving back to the local community! Highway 6 through Keystone is a four-lane highway that provides important travel routes for freight, transit, tourism and local residents. Crossing it on foot or bike? Now that’s a challenge! Join staff from CDOT, Summit County Public Works, and Keystone Transit to help break down the barrier and provide safer, more efficient connections for all. At this workshop, attendees will create a range of solutions for potential implementation in the short, mid and long-term. Registrants will receive a packet for review in advance of the workshop.

Historic Preservation in the Atomic Age: Finding and Preserving Mid-Century Architecture and History from Steel Towns to Ski Towns

Speakers:
- Julie Ann Woods, FAICP, MLA | Community Development Director, Town of Snowmass Village
- Wade Broadhead | Planning Director, City of Florence
- Amy Simon | Historic Preservation Officer, City of Aspen Community Development Department
The “Snowmass-at-Aspen” Ski Resort opened on December 15, 1967 with great fan-fare – conceived as a ski-in, ski-out resort, on the slopes of Snowmass Mountain and on the coat tails of its wildly successful sister city, Aspen. Incorporated as Snowmass Village in 1977, is 40 or 50 years of history enough to begin taking up the baton for a “historic preservation” program showcasing mid-century modern architecture? Two hundred miles to the southeast, the “Steel City of the Plains”, Pueblo, has embraced its mid-century “blue collar modernism” architecture, recognizing the cool neighborhoods that are finding their way into Millennials’ hands, but has yet to designate these neighborhoods as “historic”. What is holding them back? And back in the mountains, the City of Aspen has one of the most mature and successfully preserved mid-century architecture programs that include skier chalets, kit-built Panabodes and contemporary homes. Why is this program so successful? By comparing and contrasting the differences in mid-century architecture in all three communities, and the stages of preservation in each, town planners may discover that neglecting their atomic age heritage and mid-century architectural gems could cost them if preservation isn’t on their “radar”.

The Future of Retail: Active Ground Floors & In-Person Sales in an E-Commerce World

Speakers:

- Andy Rutz, CNU-A | Project Manager, MIG, Inc. | Sponsor!
- Kelly First | Community Development Director, City of Lone Tree
- Sung Han | Associate, Clarion Associates | Sponsor!

For years, to enliven the streetscape, cities have been crafting regulations to encourage or mandate building forms with active commercial ground floors. At the same time, in-person retail sales are declining. Required ground floor spaces often sit vacant for months or years, and some of them may never be economically viable. As questions loom about the future of retail in the face of e-commerce innovations, we need to better understand the long-term future of retailing and explore how cities can catalyze a dynamic, resilient urban environment in spite of these trends. We also need to explore how Colorado’s experience may differ from national trends.

Tiny Homes, Big Ideas: Alternative Housing, Conventional Reality

Speakers:
- Rachel Shindman, AICP | Associate, Economic & Planning Systems
- Andrew Knudtsen, CCIM | Managing Principal, Economic & Planning Systems
- Jonas DiCaprio | Design Platform
- Dan Osborn | Senior Planner, Summit County
- Jennifer Waters, EIT | Tiny House Builder

Ubiquitous in popular culture and increasingly lauded as a solution to housing affordability – what’s real, and what’s clever marketing? Are Tiny Homes revolutionizing the housing market, or a peripheral niche product? Unlike reality TV, this conversation needs to be grounded in conventional regulations and economics. Regulatory, economic, and construction perspectives will be discussed, and two Colorado developments – one in progress, one existing – will be used to examine the promises and pitfalls of Tiny Homes.

Light-hearted skits will set the stage for challenging decisions that provide greater insight into the AICP Code of Ethics.

1.5 CMs  The New Era of Neighborhood Transportation Management and Speed Mitigation

Room(s) - Torrey III & IV

Speakers:
- Ryan Noles, AICP | Transportation Planner II, City of Boulder
- Andrew Iltis, AICP | Senior Planner, Atkins Global
- Morgan Whitcomb, P.E. | Neighborhood Transportation Manager, City & County of Denver Public Works – Transportation & Mobility Division

Traffic calming techniques and city programs that target speeding traffic in neighborhoods are not new practices, but the recent invigorated focus on active transportation and safety for vulnerable roadway users is giving cities across the country a good reason to revamp and reinvest in traffic calming programs. This session will explore the recent development of Boulder’s Neighborhood Speed Management Program and Denver’s Neighborhood Transportation Management Program. Both Boulder and Denver recently worked to create their programs through public participation and by employing best practices in the field. These programs are helping these cities achieve Vision Zero by slowing speeding drivers in residential areas and enhancing pedestrian crossings, which can reduce the frequency and severity of crashes, and improve community vitality and conditions for people walking and riding bikes. Denver’s program is also being used to more effectively engage with neighborhood residents in the delivery of citywide mobility and maintenance programs.

- Michael King | Alternate Fuels & Technology Planner, Multimodel Planning Branch at CDOT
- Jason Longsdorf, AICP | Senior Transportation Planner, HDR, Inc.
- Jacob Riger, AICP | Long-Range Transportation Planning Manager, DRCOG

Do we envision Dystopia or Utopia? The hype is off the charts, particularly in tech and trade journals, regarding the impending smart mobility transformation. What changes are most likely, and which are least likely? Who benefits and who will be left behind? This session will provide up-to-date insights – based on the Mobility Choice Blueprint’s groundbreaking research – to help planners proactively plan for the best people, planet, and prosperity outcomes.

1.5 CMs  Autonomous Vehicles: Preparing Your Community for this Panacea (Or Is It a Bête Noir?)

Speakers:
- Patrick Picard, AICP | Transportation Planner, Fehr & Peers
- Chris Breiland, P.E. | Principal, Fehr & Peers
- Carly Sieff, AICP | Senior Planner, Fehr & Peers
- Bill Mahar, AICP | Senior Associate, Norris Design

Autonomous vehicles are increasingly touted as the savior to many planning challenges. As with any new technology, it’s easier to imagine the benefits than predict all the tradeoffs. In this session, we will explore the results of modeling AVs in the Denver region and other areas. What are the impacts on VMT and mode share? What are the implications to policy, safety, parking and urban design? We will use keypad polling to gauge viewpoints and facilitate an interactive discussion on how to address these challenges.

Cities As Platforms: Towards a State-Wide Living Laboratory

More than 20% of the traffic on the Internet today is sensor-based. The sidewalk you’re walking on is transmitting as much data as every fourth text of the pedestrian walking on it. Our cities are platforms. And they need to be designed as if it were a piece of information technology. Let’s have a conversation about what that means.

Room(s) - Crestone I & II

Speakers:
- Brian Connoly, Attorney | Shareholder, Otten Johnson | Sponsor!
- Timothy Cox, Attorney | Partner, Michow Cox & McAskin, LLP

The right to initiative and referendum is secured to the voters by the Colorado Constitution, and it is frequently used in connection with planning and zoning issues. Lakewood, for example, is currently facing an initiative that would restrict the issuance of building permits for new development, and other Colorado jurisdictions are seeing similar voter-initiated measures of importance to planners. This session will discuss the legal aspects of initiatives and referenda as well as practical strategies for planners to survive the political storms involved with them.

Cities around the world are rethinking the traditional definition of a street, going beyond the prioritization of vehicles and placing the emphasis back on people. Organizations like WalkScore, ULI, APA and others have contributed greatly to championing mixed-use, compact, walkable communities that can help us to meet individual health goals like 10,000 steps/day. Look at how Denver’s 5280 Loop is answering how to transform a network of streets into iconic shared spaces that will continue to move people, connect neighborhoods and celebrate the culture of the residents. Further the discussion about how we should design our built environment in a way that ensures healthy behavior rather than requiring residents to set aside time in their busy days to pursue a healthy lifestyle.

New Ruralism in STaR Communities

Speakers:
- Jessica Garrow, AICP | Community Development Director, City of Aspen
- John Shephard, AICP | Planning Manager, Archuleta County
New Ruralism is a concept that has garnered research support from the APA Chapter Presidents Council and the APA Divisions Council. Planners in Small Town and Rural communities are often dealing with declining and aging populations, businesses leaving for other communities, shrinking tax bases, and reduced levels of service. In order to address these issues and thrive, small towns need to take bold steps to harness existing assets while also attracting and retaining businesses, residents, visitors, and tax dollars. In many ways, New Ruralism is the Small Town answer to New Urbanism. What are the keys to sustainable locally grown initiatives that are helping certain small towns to thrive, and how can we enhance, proliferate and preserve those characteristics? Learn from examples shared by the New England Planning Chapter in their groundbreaking study of New Ruralism, and examples from the Small Town and Rural Planning Division, including examples from Colorado, Indiana, and Georgia. Then participate in discussion with fellow planners about what best practices can be used in your community to ensure prosperous economies and strengthen small town quality of life.

Women in the Workplace – A Synopsis and Call to Action

Speakers:
- Molly Veldkamp, AICP | Senior Transportation Planner, Apex Design
- Jessica Hernandez, AICP | Senior Transportation Planner, Apex Design

Join us for a round table discussion of the 2017 Women in the Workplace report. “Women remain underrepresented at every level in corporate America, despite earning more college degrees than men for thirty years and counting. There is a pressing need to do more, and most organizations realize this: company commitment to gender diversity is at an all-time high for the third year in a row. Despite this commitment, progress continues to be too slow – and may even be stalling. One of the most powerful reasons for this is a simple one: we have blind spots when it comes to diversity, and we can’t solve problems that we don’t see or understand clearly.” Join us for a round table discussion of the 2017 Women in the Workplace report. We will review the latest data from 222 companies and more than 70,000 employees and talk about what we can do in our organization to promote equity in our workplaces and projects.

Speakers:
- Matt Prosser | Vice President, Economic & Planning Systems

- Chris Markuson | Director of Economic Development & Geographic Information Systems, Pueblo County
- Elliot Kilham | Associate, Economic & Planning Systems

Manufacturing and industrial development have changed rapidly in the last 50 years, and the rate of disruption and innovation is unlikely to slow anytime soon. Automation is increasing productivity, but decreasing well-paying, middle-income jobs. Driven by demands of online retailers, distribution space is getting bigger and its appetite for land growing larger. Meanwhile, manufacturing and light industrial are getting smaller and more and more looking for infill sites in urban environments. This session reviews trends in manufacturing and industrial in the nation and Colorado and examines how local three communities in the state have used land use tools and incentives to adapt to changes and support employment growth.

Between 2010 and 2015 Denver’s population increased by almost 14%, adding 83,000 new residents. While the city’s strong economy and positive growth bring many benefits, there are also major challenges. Perhaps the most concerning is a surge in housing prices and an increasing number of people — including teachers, families, and the elderly -- who can no longer afford to call the city home.

With affordability on the forefront of Denverites’ minds, the City is advancing major plans and initiatives to create a more equitable future. This includes Blueprint Denver, a community-driven plan with a bold vision for harnessing Denver’s growth so that it fosters equity among all neighborhoods, mitigates involuntary displacement, and results in land use regulations that encourage innovative solutions to the housing crisis.

Blueprint Denver is complemented by Housing an Inclusive Denver, to be adopted this fall. This five-year action plan prioritizes the city’s policies, programs, and investments to address Denver’s housing needs across the entire housing continuum. It recognizes the uniqueness of the city’s neighborhoods by advancing tools that are tailored to a wide variety of neighborhood types and housing needs.

A Municipal Staff Planner’s Survival Guide: Hints, Tips, & Tricks for Planners in Local Government

Speakers:
- Jennifer Jones, AICP | Senior Planner, Town of Monument
- Steve Timms, AICP | Planning Manager, City of Commerce City
- Paul Workman | Senior Planner, Town of Parker

A discussion of the challenges of daily Planning work in municipal government, with a focus on project management and public hearings. Is there a more effective way to perform development review? Should your staff report template be updated? Can you improve your effectiveness and efficiency by setting up simple processes? How do you deal with vocal neighborhood opposition? What if your elected/appointed officials don’t understand Planning? Hints, tips, tricks, and examples will be presented to facilitate a discussion about handling the difficult challenges regularly faced by staff planners.

Planners to Managers

Speakers:
- Russell Forrest, AICP | City Manager, City of Gunnison
- April Getchius, AICP | Town Manager, Town of Timnath
- Dara MacDonald | Town Manager, Town of Crested Butte

Planners are often thrust into leadership roles by facilitating and managing large public projects, which can fundamentally affect the future of our communities. We also celebrate when promotions occur from planner I, to Senior Planner, and then Planning Director. The common attribute that leads to these opportunities is leadership. However, despite the myth, “very few natural born leaders” occur in a work place. In reality, developing quality leaders and managers requires training and experience-like most things in life. This session will provide practical advice from City/Town managers, who are also planners, on how to achieve your leadership goals whether that involves managing complex projects or being the City Manager.

Incorporating Young Voices in Transportation Planning

Speakers:
- Darcy Kitching | Boulder Program Director, Walk2Connect
- Morgan Huber | Transportation Planner, Apex Design, PC
- Katie Guthrie, AICP | Principal City Planner, City of Loveland Public Works Department

This powerful panel will share with you three ways to meaningfully engage young people in your transportation and city planning projects. Walk2Connect, WTS TransportationYOU, and the City of Loveland will discuss the power of including young people in planning from fun and informative activities to deep-dive engagement techniques. During this interactive session, you too can participate in a meaningful way and learn how authentic engagement of young people can be incorporated into your planning projects.

How can you better prepare your community for an uncertain future? What are the driving forces of change you are most uncertain about? The magnitude and direction of climate change? The future health of the local economy? How will your planning strategies hold up in the future? What plausible futures must you prepare for? How are your long-range planning resources best invested? Exploratory scenario planning is disrupting traditional planning and decision making. It can help identify the solutions that would prove the most robust and resilient to the universe of futures that you, your community, your business or your industry may face. Learn to plan to prosper, despite what your future may hold. Panelists will engage participants in a hands-on demonstration of the process and tools available to planners using a case addressing Colorado’s water and growth future. Walk away empowered with an experience to inspire your own planning and knowledge of how to facilitate an Exploratory Scenario Planning process so your plans are flexible and responsive to the future.

Speakers:
- Jill Strange | Farmers Market SNAP Coordinator, Boulder County Public Health
- Wendy Moschetti, MURP | Director of Food Systems, LiveWell Colorado
- Gretchen Armijo, LEEP, AICP | Built Environment Administrator, City of Denver Department of Environmental Health

Access to healthy food options is an important element of thriving, healthy communities. This panel presentation will highlight Colorado case studies that have moved the needle on increasing food access. The audience will hear from three panelists: City and County of Denver, Boulder County Public Health and LiveWell Colorado. Attendees will learn about planning efforts, funding strategies and opportunities for local government to engage in food access programs. Wendy Peters will share her work as LiveWell Colorado’s Director of Food Systems, including her work completing Food Access Assessments. Jill Strange will present on Boulder County Public Health’s Double Up Food Buck program, which provides access to fresh, local healthy food for low-income families. Gretchen Armijo will present on the City and County of Denver’s health impact assessment and neighborhood plans that emphasize increasing access to healthy food.

There will be ample time for attendees to ask questions and discuss how to get started with food access and food system planning. Attendees will leave this session feeling enthused to bring best practices and lessons learned into their own communities! This session will be moderated by Michele Scanze, committee co-chair of APA CO’s Healthy Communities Committee.

The focus will be on changes in demand for unskilled and semi-skilled jobs and the personal service, tourism, retail, personal care, and technology sectors and what those changes mean for future demand for various types of development.
Building Long-Term Relationships with Elected Officials that Achieve Results

Speaker:
• Sam Mamet | Executive Director, Colorado Municipal League

As a planner, you understand the importance of setting goals, long-term objectives, and measurable outcomes. Having the buy-in of your municipality’s elected officials is critical. Who are these mysterious city council or town board members and what are their main priorities, goals, and aspirations? The Colorado Municipal League (CML) is a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization serving the advocacy, information, and training needs of municipalities across the state.

During this session, attendees will hear from CML’s executive director Sam Mamet, who has worked closely with thousands of elected officials from cities and towns of all sizes and regions, giving him unique insight into what makes them “tick!” He’ll share what their priorities are, the issues that keep them up at night, and their approaches to the planning process. He’ll also provide suggestions for how to engage with your newly elected officials and strategies for effectively communicating the importance of your community’s strategic plan.

Incorporating Resilience in Downtown Plans

Speakers:
• Harry Brennan | Senior Planner / Designer, Winter & Company
• Randy Hunt, AICP | Community Development Director, Town of Estes Park
• Steve Lane, AIA LEED AP | Founder & Principal, BAS1S

This session will explore opportunities to integrate resilience principles into a Downtown planning process. Adopted in January 2018, the Estes Park Downtown Plan and process sought ways to achieve placemaking, economic, and transportation objectives through creative design solutions that also addressed serious flooding concerns. Resilience was incorporated at every turn, from overarching principles to framework design objectives to detailed conceptual design.
